* Before starting your Photoshop project, read through the latest and greatest Photoshop tutorials available on the web. One good place to search for Photoshop tutorials is at The Learning Place at `www.thelearningplace.com`. * For those who are considering taking a Photoshop course, visit the Photoshop User's Guide online at ` ## Moving Photos to the Web Photoshop's advanced image manipulation features can be extremely helpful to photographers. For those who want to share images online, a site called Shutterfly offers an online photo printing service to create, print, and ship high-quality images online. A major downside to Shutterfly is that the service is closed source, which means that you can't access the programs inside, except by purchasing the service. Be sure to check out the image editing options available with Shutterfly when you get a membership. They're pretty sophisticated and offer a lot of ways to edit images and even create the printed products from your images. If you're not quite ready to offer your photography services on the web, you can create a simple website with a company's web presence by using one of many online web design programs and then simply upload photos. Some of the programs that I describe below also include image editing features. I recommend that you experiment to find one that works best for your needs. Web design and editing can be a steep learning curve. You can search online for help, or check out book chapters on web design, online publishing, and so on. If you're looking for a book to start reading, check out _Web Design For Dummies_ (Wiley) and _Inkscape for Dummies_ (Wiley). You can also visit ` for a collection of articles on creating websites.

Q: Rails 3.2, Rspec / Capybara, check_box :value => 1 I'm new to rails and I'm having trouble getting my tests to match what the view is spitting out. My test is this (simplified): context 'change update: dis.user.title' do it 'updates email, keeps original' do page.should have_selector('#user_username_div') fill_in 'user[username]', :with => "firstname.lastname" click_button "Update" assert_difference('user.title', 1) end end I'm asserting that the correct username field is selected. When I go to the view, I see that check_box is still checking the original field (instead of the updated one). My view is like this: update_user_path(@user), :html => { :method => :patch }) do |f| %> "user_form", :locals => {:f => f} %> "button primary" %> My partial is like this: "username_#{@user.id}", :value => 1 %> I'm using rspec 2.6.0, rspec-rails 3.0.3 and capybara 1.1.2. Thanks in advance. A: One way of dealing with this is to change the name of the checkbox from :username to :user_username. Any names starting with username are already taken. You need to add the following to the top of the test

News Showtime makes 'Dexter' spinoff Showtime has ordered a spinoff of its Emmy-winning series "Dexter" to be set in the Italian city of Venice. "The Voyeur," named for the city's term for citizens who secretly film and photograph strangers, centers on the relationship between an amnesiac FBI agent, his female colleague and the person who sent them to Venice after the disappearance of a young couple. The CBS Television Studios-based show is a co-production between the premium cable network and MPS sps, whose parent company is Mitinori Watanabe.Q: Kendo UI Full Calendar string data source I´m trying to implement fullcalendar with string data source. I have a lot of input values to search in the server to find my appointments. I have a strange problem, the'select' is not displayed, though i have the events-data in my json array. My json is like this: var appointments = { "data": [{ "appointmentId": 1, "appointmentName": "Doo de doo", "appointmentStart": "2013-10-30T19:30:00", "appointmentEnd": "2013-11-15T19:30:00" }], "total": 1, "success": true }; My kendo-fullcalendar code: $("#calendar").kendoCalendar({ dataSource: { data: JSON.stringify(appointments), serverFiltering: true, serverSorting: true, schema: { data: "data", total: "total", success: "success" } }, select: function(e) { console.log('Selecting Event:'+ JSON.stringify(appointments)); var item =
